

Dear Dental Board,

I am a dentist in NSW. I feel that the proposed changes to the scope of the practice for oral therapists would severely undermine the dental profession. Dentists would be undercut by therapists and it makes a mockery of the 7 years of study that dentists do to do the work that we do. If therapists want to work independently and increase the scope of their practice then they should sit the GAMSAT and gain entry into a graduate dental program.

Kind regards,

Dr Krishnan
